Before you renew that software.

One subscription. Eight questions. A clearer next step.

Use short notes. Type in a PDF reader or print, then save a copy.

Software / plan

Currency on the bill

Renewal date

Last day to give notice

Next charge date

01 What are we paying?

Write down the plan, billing period, seats and any usage charges or taxes. Use the currency on the bill.

02 What job does it do?

Name the task, who actually uses it and the result it helps produce. Check how many paid seats are still needed.

03 What depends on it?

List the files, reports, connections or client work that would need attention if the plan changed.

04 What work is still left for us?

Count the checking, corrections and copying people still do around it. A subscription can be cheap and still take a lot of time.

Make the call.

Keeping it is a decision too. Write down what makes sense for this tool.

05 What could we use instead?

Compare a smaller plan, a tool you already pay for or an alternative. Keeping the current setup is an option too.

06 What would changing involve?

Include setup, training, moving data and paying for both tools during the switch. Check who would do the work.

07 Which numbers can we trust?

Keep confirmed charges separate from estimates. Time saved is useful, but it is not automatically money back in the bank.

08 What will we do next?

Choose keep, adjust, compare or check further. Write down why, who will act and the date to decide.

Who will act? (That can be you.)

Date to decide or revisit

The notice deadline can be earlier than renewal. Check the provider terms.

Keep the dates in your Renewal Tracker

Need help? Technology Cost Review